The quality and effectiveness of medication-related communication influences medication safety, adherence, and patient satisfaction. Improving communication about medications between healthcare professionals, patients, and family members is essential for continuity of patient care and better clinical outcomes.

To suggest a topic, please email wellness@rochesterregional.org. To read the full article, click the linked title.

- Lindquist LA et al. (2013). Primary care physician communication at hospital discharge reduces medication discrepancies. Journal of Hospital Medicine (Online), 8(12), 672-7.

Bibliography compiled by Karen Sampone, M.L.S.